Marijuana Doctor: Our Patients are our #1 Priority!

"As a medical marijuana patient myself, I understand firsthand the impact of having a qualifying condition as well as experiencing the health benefits that medical cannabis delivers. It helped enhance my quality of life and it was the major driving force for starting Marijuana Doctor.

I am delighted that over the last eight years, we've had the honor to assist countless patients to improve their quality of life after becoming medical marijuana patients in Florida. We are very proud of the over 50,000 5-star Google reviews that we have received from our patients.

On behalf of myself and the entire Marijuana Doctor team, I want to thank our patients for their business as well as for spreading the education around medical marijuana benefits in their communities, so that more people can learn that there is an alternative natural option available for their health needs. I encourage you to reach out to your friends and family so that you and they can take advantage of the discount that our referral program offers.

We are always here for our patients who come first in our organization, offering caring and professional patient care six days a week. Our team of physicians and patient care specialists at Marijuana Doctor are dedicated to providing our patients with the education and services they need."

What is the Endocannabinoid System?

The Endocannabinoid System (ECS) is a complex system in the human body, which maintains all processes throughout the brain and body, including how the body manages appetite, pain, sleep, pleasure, and mood.

The role of this system is that of creating balance within the body to achieve the optimal state for maintaining health and natural wellness. ECS receptors are found in the skin, muscles, bones, throughout the central and peripheral nervous system, the immune system, and even the reproductive organs.

Certain chemical compounds called cannabinoids, attach to ECS receptors and behave like chemical messengers to control physiological signaling. When produced by the body, these compounds are called endocannabinoids and when created by plants, they are called phytocannabinoids, such as THC and CBD.

Medical Marijuana & the Human Endocannabinoid System

Why Medical Marijuana?

The use of the cannabis plant to relieve medical symptoms has been documented for over five centuries across the globe from China to Canada to the UK to Israel.

The medical properties of cannabis stem from two main compounds, THC and CBD, along with over 100 other beneficial compounds in Marijuana including other cannabinoids along with terpenes and flavonoids.

Medical Marijuana:

Relieves

Often times, diseases and illnesses produce extremely painful symptoms. Cannabis has proven to be an effective treatment for people suffering from migraines, arthritis, multiple sclerosis, PMS, anxiety, etc. Cannabis also has the ability to prevent and/or decrease opiate addiction due to the fact that cannabis and opiates share many of the same benefits. When compared to opiates, cannabis carries a significantly lower risk.

Combats

Cannabis significantly combats the symptoms of depression, anxiety, PTSD, ADHD, etc. It is a natural relaxant that can ease the symptoms of these disorders. As a result, using cannabis will boost mood, improve sleep and lessen the number of episodes that one may experience. Cannabis is commonly used to stimulate the appetite of chemotherapy patients.

Treats

Marijuana treats symptoms of many different diseases. Cannabis can temporarily decrease pressure in the eye, hence relieving the symptoms of glaucoma. Medical marijuana has antispasmodic properties, which decrease symptoms of epilepsy, seizures and Parkinson's diseases. As far as inflammatory bowel diseases go, cannabis can effectively treat several of the related symptoms like nausea, abdominal pain and diarrhea. Medical marijuana can also treat asthma by improving pulmonary function, over time.

Calms

Cannabis has the ability to calm a patient. Medical marijuana can effectively calm the symptoms of Tourette's by slowing down the tics associated with the disease. It can also treat OCD by decreasing the obsessive neurological compulsions.

Dosing: An Individualized Approach

Start Low and Go Slow

As you first start using medical marijuana, begin with a low dose (which the dispensary can recommend based on product selection) to give your body the time to adjust and enable you to get the most benefit from each dose.

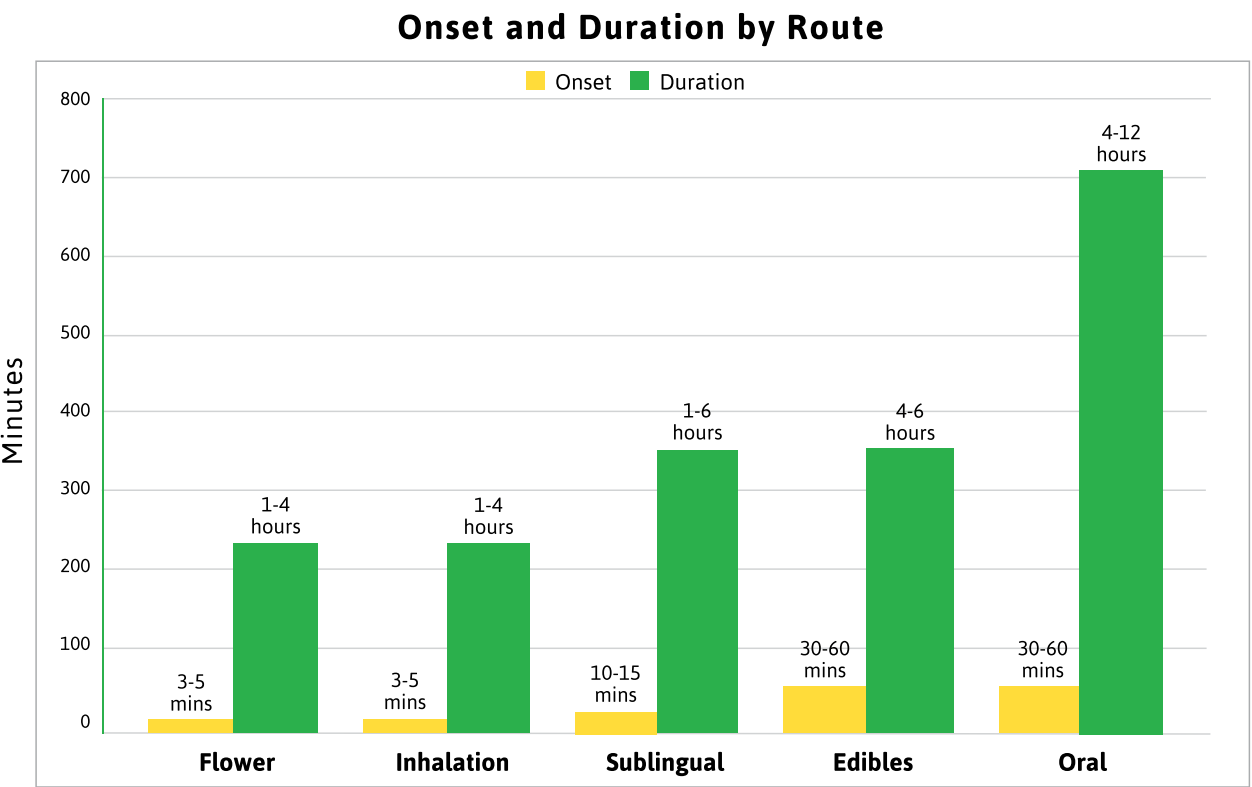

Slowly and Gradually Increase Your Dose

The dosage of medical marijuana will vary by individual and depend upon the medical condition. You can gradually increase your dose each week until you find a level that provides you with consistent symptom relief.

CBD + THC Can Maximize the Entourage Effect

Many patients find that they experience the best therapeutic outcome when they use CBD in conjunction with THC. This may be achieved by using CBD products along with medical marijuana and/or by trying combination products which contain different ratios of THC:CBD.

Which Strain Should You Try: Sativa, Hybrid or Indica?

While there are dozens of variations of strains of medical marijuana, most dispensaries break the medicinal benefits down into two or three categories: Sativa, Indica, and Hybrids of the two. This makes it much easier for patients to choose the strain that will help treat their symptoms most effectively. Take a look at the breakdown below, for a better understanding of which may be right for you!

The choice of strain is a critical factor affecting an individual's experience with medical marijuana. Strains are different types of cannabis plants, of which Sativa, Indica, and Hybrids are the most common.

SATIVA	HYBRID OF SATIVA AND INDICA	INDICA
Often preferred for Daytime Use	Choice for Day or Evening	Often preferred for Nighttime Use
Uplifting, energizing, and stimulating	Blended mix of effects, combining traits of both parent strains	Soothing, relaxing, and sedating
Good choice for patients who not only need relief but who also want to stay energized and alert	Good choice for patients who are seeking a balance between invigoration and sedation while seeking symptom relief	Good choice for patients who are seeking calming and to unwind while managing their symptoms
Sativa strains usually contain a higher CBD vs THC level	Often contain a relatively balanced mix of THC and CBD	Indica strains usually contain a higher THC vs CBD level
Common Symptom Relief: Boost mental focus Reduce pain Reduce nausea Relieve depression Reduce inflammation Relieve headaches and migraines Elevate mood	Common Symptom Relief: Reduce pain Reduce nausea Relieve depression Reduce inflammation Stimulate appetite Relieve headaches and migraines	Common Symptom Relief: Promote relaxation Reduce stress and anxiety Promote restful sleep Reduce pain Reduce inflammation Stimulate appetite Reduce muscle spasms

What are Terpenes?

Responsible for the distinctively sweet, citrusy, and earthy flavors of cannabis, terpenes are somewhat the unsung heroes of the cannabis world. If you've ever identified a strain from just one smell, or truly appreciated its taste, what you were processing is in fact the terpene profile which gives each strain its unique personality.

Terpenes change more than just the smell of marijuana, they also provide each strain with its own unique physiologic effects. These essential oils, which are secreted by the cannabis plant's sticky glands, contribute to what is known as the "entourage effect" - the harmonic union of cannabinoids, terpenes and flavonoids which produces a more enhanced effect than any one compound on its own.

While there are more than 100 identified terpenes in cannabis (each of which produces a distinct combination of feelings and effects), some are more common than others. Knowing what to look for, what appeals to you, and what doesn't will help you get the relief that you need. Here are the more popular terpenes and their noted effects:

TERPENE	AROMA	PROPERTIES
Bisabolol	Floral and black pepper	Antibacterial and antifungal
Caryophyllene	Spicy and peppery	Anti-inflammatory, anti-anxiety, pain relief
Humulene	Woodsy and earthy	Antibacterial, anti-inflammatory, appetite suppressant, and pain relief
Limonene	Citrus	Anti-anxiety and stress relief
Linalool	Floral and citrus	Pain relief and relaxation
Myrcene	Earthy	Sedative and muscle relaxation
Pinene	Pine	Anti-inflammatory and effective against short-term memory effects of THC
Ocimene	Sweet	Anti-inflammatory
